

Managing Editor of Washingtonian

Limpert

Jack Limpert has been appointed managing editor of the Washingtonian Magazine, replacing Mark Baldwin, who has resigned to become a consultant and work on a new children's magazine. Limpert came to Washington in 1967 as editor of the D.C. Examiner, but left that paper a year ago to accept a congressional fellowship. He has been managing editor of the San Jose Sunpapers in California and editor of the Warren Tri City Progress in Detroit.
